

Dietmar Rost, Erhard Stölting, Tomasz Zarycki,
Paolo Pasi, Ivan Pedrazzini, Anna Tucholska

New Regional Identities and Strategic Essentialism

Case studies from Poland, Italy and Germany

Region – Nation – Europa, 39,
LIT Verlag, Münster – Hamburg – London, 2007
552 pages, 39.90 EUR, Pb., ISBN 978-3-8258-9656-0

Regional identity has become an important issue in debate on current changes in Europe. However, that has happened at a time when many scientists and some social movements adopt critical stances regarding the concept of identity. This paradox encourages the authors to explore current discourses on regions and regional identity.

Major questions are:

- What do current discourses on regional identity look like?
- Is there any relationship of current projects, institutionalisations and discussions of regional identity with the criticisms of the notion of collective identity?
- Do current projects and debates of regional identity pay attention to problems pointed out by such criticism (for example the relationship to the "other", i.e. those who are culturally different)?

Key features of the book include:

- Case studies on regions in Poland (Świętokrzyskie, Śląskie and Warmińsko-Mazurskie), Italy (Trentino-South Tyrol, Friuli Venezia Giulia and Veneto) and Germany (Brandenburg including its relation to the city-state Berlin).
- Accounts of nation state contexts and current developments in regionalisation, regionalism and federalisation debate.
- Thorough exploration of fields most important to the shaping of regional identity (school, regional media, representations of history, regional politics...).
- Demonstration of much variation in discourses and projects of regional identity.
- Reflections on strategic essentialism and heuristic use of that concept.

The authors – sociologists from Warsaw, Trento, Bolzano and Potsdam – collaborated in a project which was funded by the Volkswagen Foundation in its initiative "How do we perceive or shape 'foreign' and 'native' cultural identities? Research on processes of intercultural dissociation, mediation and identity-shaping".

New regional identities and strategic essentialism appeals to readers interested in current European regionalism and regionalisation as well as to those more inclined to examine general questions of collective identity coming especially from sociology, political science, social geography, regional sciences, contemporary history, social anthropology or cultural studies.

Contents of New Regional Identities and Strategic Essentialism

1 Introduction	1
1.1 Regions, regional identity and history	5
1.2 Strategic essentialism as a heuristic concept	9
1.3 The case studies	11
1.4 Comparative conclusions	16
Part I
Regional identity in three Polish voivodships: Świętokrzyskie, Śląskie (Silesia) and Warmińsko-Mazurskie
2 Introduction	25
2.1 The post-communist transformation and regional identity	25
2.2 The historical heritage	26
2.3 The debate over the administrative reform in the 1990s	33
2.4 Regional identity and regional movements in Poland	42
2.5 The choice of regions	44
2.6 Regional education	44
3 The Śląskie (Silesian) voivodship	47
3.1 Historical background	47
3.2 Geography of the new Silesian voivodship	52
3.3 The Silesian debate on regional identity	56
4 The Świętokrzyskie voivodship	97
4.1 Historical background	97
4.2 The "defence" of the voivodship	98
4.3 The reinforcement of the voivodship image and prestige	106
5 The Warmińsko-Mazurskie voivodship	125
5.1 Historical background	125
5.2 The making of the region	126
5.3 Region without identity: the heritage of the communist period?	128
5.4 The Elite Discourse	135
5.5 Organisations of ethnic minorities	152
5.6 Other relevant organisations	155
6 Conclusion	158
Part II
Regional identity in North-East Italy
7 Introduction	163
7.1 Italian history and regions	164
7.2 Regions with special statute in North-East Italy	174
8 Trentino-South Tyrol	181
8.1 A divided region	181
8.2 Euroregion Tirol-Südtirol/Alto Adige-Trentino	186
8.3 South Tyrol. A model of autonomy and its changes	192
8.4 Trentino: old and new autonomist movements	214
8.5 Conclusion	221
9 Friuli Venezia Giulia	224
9.1 History	224
9.2 "Friül" as a political and cultural project	226
9.3 Multilingualism and multiculturalism – new legitimations for Friuli Venezia Giulia's autonomy?	235
9.4 Conclusion	241
10 Veneto	242
10.1 History and culture	242
10.2 Images of the region from 1950 to 1990	247
10.3 Institutionalising Venetian identity	254
10.4 Conclusion	260
11 Lega Nord: Padanian identity, regional identities and localism	261
11.1 Changing images	261
11.2 Localism, economic growth and the question of immigration. The case of Treviso	266
11.3 Conclusion	268
12 Nord Est: an alternative proposal of regionalism	269
12.1 Previous concepts: Tre Venezie and Venetian culture	269
12.2 The emergence of Nord Est as a new concept and the role of the newspaper Il Gazzettino	270
12.3 Nord Est: a project focusing on economy and political co-operation	273
12.4 Conclusion	278
13 Conclusion	279
Part III
Regional identity in the German Land Brandenburg
14 Introduction	283
14.1 The establishment of new Länder in East Germany	285
14.2 Land Brandenburg – its establishing, history, and public sphere	307
15 Regional television: The making of "The Brandenburgers"	329
15.1 Excursus: Media studies of British Cultural Studies – a rediscovery of text analysis	330
15.2 "The Brandenburgers", a serial on history	334
15.3 Conclusions	359
16 Brandenburg in school curricula and textbooks	362
16.1 Excursus: Scientific debates on "small space" in German school teaching and the notion of Heimat	364
16.2 Brandenburg in Brandenburg Curricula	371
16.3 School textbooks of geography in class 5	378
16.4 Prussia at school	385
16.5 A new and different curriculum for geography	388
16.6 Conclusions	389
17 Representations of history – attempts to legitimate a new region	391
17.1 Prussia	392
17.2 Contemporary history	417
17.3 Conclusions	422
18 Social, historical and cultural sciences and regional identity	423
18.1 Academic historiography: Regional history (Landes- und Regionalgeschichte)	423
18.2 Social research institutes, social researchers	427
18.3 Forum Zukunft Brandenburg	429
18.4 Conclusions	431
19 Brandenburg and the foreign: Xenophobia, antiracism, Sorbs and Euroregions. Open regionalism?	432
19.1 Xenophobia and "tolerant Brandenburg"	432
19.2 Sorbs	439
19.3 Euroregion Viadrina and other projects of German-Polish understanding and co-operation	443
20 Conclusion	447
Part IV
Social science approaches to collective identity, essentialism, constructionism and strategic essentialism
21 Collective identity, criticism of the concept and identity politics	451
21.1 Collective identity, problems of a concept (Niethammer)	454
21.2 Excursus: Nationalism as an example for essentialist identity politics	457
21.3 Essentialism and social constructionism (Benhabib)	458
21.4 Variations of constructionist approaches	462
21.5 The discussion of primordialism as an example for misleading discussions on essentialism and constructionism	469
21.6 Identity politics and social theory (Calhoun)	470
21.7 A first conclusion	474
22 Attempts to conceptualise collective identities beyond the dichotomy of essentialism versus constructionism	477
22.1 Strategic essentialism: essentialism legitimated politically (Spivak, Fuss)	477
22.2 Universalism as an alternative to essentialism (Klinger)	485
22.3 Essentialism and anti-essentialism as supplements (Smith)	488
22.4 Old and new identities (Hall)	488
22.5 A critique of the anti-essentialist criticism of multiculturalism (Modood)	494
22.6 Critical realism's moderate essentialism and the question of causality (Sayer and Bader)	497
22.7 Conclusions	500		